This course addresses two of the university’s transformative learning goals: discipline knowledge, and leadership. This course addresses discipline knowledge through information about criminal law and the elements of crimes. This course addresses leadership through public speaking opportunities, as well as gaining confidence to discuss difficult issues and contemplate many different solutions. INSTRUCTIONAL STRATEGIES

The primary instructional strategy which will be utilized by the instructor in classroom is lecture and the Socratic method on cases. Students are encouraged to take notes on the lectures as the majority of examination questions will come from the lectures, text materials and class discussions. Guest speakers and other instructional materials will be used as are appropriate.

EXAMINATIONS

There will be two examinations during the semester, including the final examination. The final semester examination will be comprehensive. The exams and the grading system which will be utilized, are explained in the paragraphs which follow. Each exam is worth 100 points.

All examinations will consist of multiple choice, true-false, and/or essay questions. The student should answer the questions in such a manner to address the most salient points which were addressed in the text and/or in class lectures. If a written answer is not legible, an answer will be counted incorrect. Examination dates will be announced in class. Examinations not taken will be assigned a grade of zero and will be averaged in with other examination scores unless permission is granted to take a make-up examination.
Make-up examinations are at the discretion of the professor and will be considered on a case-by-case basis. Those exams will be scheduled at the discretion of the professor.

In addition to the two exams, students will be required to complete a case assignment (term paper) and oral presentation of that case assignment. The case assignment (term paper) and oral presentation are each worth 50 points (100 points total).

TERM PAPER

All undergraduate students will be expected to complete one case assignment. These will be assigned to you in class. You must give an oral presentation of the case in class. A more detailed discussion of the assignment and its requirements will be discussed in class. The case assignments will count for one-third of your grade.

GRADING

The following policies will determine the guidelines for grading tests and other work for the course. An I will be given only when a minor amount of work (one test or one term paper) is late due to serious illness, death in the family, administrative job duties or other legitimate excuses (as determined by the professor) that compel the student to be absent.

A grade reflects superior work
C grade reflects average work
F grade is a failing grade

ATTENDANCE POLICY

As this is an upper level and graduate course it is assumed that students will attend class regularly. Any student who misses more than 30% of the legal class periods is subject to the grade of “F” regardless of assignment and test scores.

MAKE-UP WORK POLICY

Exams will be taken at scheduled times unless arrangements are made with the professor. Students who miss exams due to an excused absence (e.g. death in the family or documented illnesses) will be allowed to take a make-up exam. If at all possible the student should contact the professor within 24 hours of the original exam date. If possible, please notify the professor before the scheduled exam. The professor reserves the right to make all make-up exams 100% essay exams. The professor also reserves the right to issue a zero to any student not adhering to this policy.

Late assignments are accepted with penalties and only until one week after the original due date. Each day the assignment is late is worth a letter grade. For example, if the assignment is due at 1pm on November 4th, it is late at 1:01pm on 11/4 and the highest grade you could receive would be a B. If you turned in the assignment on 11/6, the highest grade you would receive would be a D.
